Jim's Journal

You've heard and read some of the statistics...nationally that somewhere between 80-90% of churches in America are plateaued or declining. This also holds true with a similar study Lifeway did among Southern Baptists. The number of baptisms in SBC life is at its lowest in 6-7 years, even internationally, fewer baptisms were recorded than in a decade. While in Kentucky, our churches are moving against that trend in attendance and Baptisms, we are still looking at an entire generation (between the ages of 12-24) that is 90%+

“unchurched” (meaning they do not regularly attend an evangelical, Bible-teaching church). That 12/24 window numbers close to a million in Kentucky alone, which means we have 900,000 students among that range that are yet to be reached! A Barna Research Group 2014 study cited five compelling reasons church engagement and attendance continues to decline, especially among millennials and younger. I share these along with my personal insights.

The church is irrelevant, the leaders are hypocritical, and leaders have experienced too much moral failure. It is absolutely critical that the church foster a culture of integrity that is beyond reproach, an authenticity that cannot be questioned, and is a community that's loving, grace-filled, and welcoming (especially to those who are lost and far from God). Jesus indicated that it would be by our fruit that others would recognize us...there has never been a time that this has been more true or more needed! Love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness...you get the idea...

God is missing in the church. There are an ever-growing number of people who claim to be searching for God and indicate they aren't finding Him in the organized church (fruit simply not evident). If someone were searching for God, would they find Him in your church?

Legitimate doubt is prohibited. It is very difficult to have honest conversations in many churches, especially if one is honestly expressing doubt. In more moderate churches truth is relative, so there is ambiguity and lack of any foundation. In more conservative churches questions are often dismissed or given trite answers. Churches need to welcome questions and be open to having conversations with those who doubt instead of dismissing them.

People aren't learning about God. A portion of this is that Christians have developed their own insider language, “church-speak.” The longer we are “INSIDERS” the more our language is unfamiliar to “OUTSIDERS.” Christ-followers/teachers/pastors need to speak with clarity and show how the truth of God's Word is applied to every day life and that it is shown in our expression of faith in love and service.

They're not finding community. The Barna Research Group in another study points out that despite an epidemic of loneliness in our culture, only 10% report finding “community” in a church. If there is ANY PLACE that should be a place where LOVE IS SPOKEN, it MUST BE the church! I firmly believe that if churches really loved the way Jesus loved, we would not have ANY empty spots in ANY of our churches period.

So, what does this mean to us? Churches that want to really impact lostness will be a place where leadership is authentic and transparent; a place where people can feel a real sense of connection and community; and a place where doubts and questions are listened to and answered by speaking the truth (God's Word) in LOVE! No one should be able to do real community better than the church. At the heart of our faith is a relationship with God, with others, and ourselves. Churches that create a sense of healthy community will be magnets to those lost and searching of all generations.

The church must also be a place that listens, engages with people and their messy lives, and where people can GROW! Finally, the church MUST BE ABSOLUTELY MISSION FOCUSED! The center of our mission is Christ. While most organizations naturally drift toward an insider focus, churches must resist this and root this out at all costs! A church that is focused on the mission of Jesus will NEVER become self-obsessed. Those that get away from the mission are marked by self-obsession. I am convinced it is a huge contributing factor to why churches are not growing.

Pray with me that our churches will be absolutely sold out to our mission, that we can reflect these qualities listed, and that we NEVER be satisfied until we are reaching people in our communities!

Walking with Him,

Jim Woolums
