QUARTERLY MIND BODY & SPIRIT NEWSLETTER

Hi all,

I recently read an article in which Oprah gets ridiculed in using the term "speak your truth". I guess it seems there are many people caught up in the absolute definition of what "truth" is right now? Funny why that is? Telling the truth has always been important. I remember telling my daughters there was nothing worse they could do then lie to me. The truth is necessary in a world where we must trust one another. Trusting one another is necessary to survival at times. No wonder people get hung up if they feel someone is trying to change what truth is? But this simple direction to "speak your truth" has nothing to do with multiple truths.

Clearly not a new, trademark phrase that Oprah came up with as the "New Age" people have used this phrase, "Speak your truth", quite a bit. Does that mean that we don't know what the truth is? Does it mean we are advocating the use of "alternative facts"? Goodness NO! When we ask someone to "Speak their truth" we are asking them to tell their story. Everyone has a story about their life events and that's what makes it "their truth". You see there is no one else who could explain exactly how you experienced your life the way that you did. This is not about the facts as others see it. It's not about saying, "I think the sky is turquoise or sea foam instead of blue, and that is my truth!" That's about perception as we could all see things just a bit different when looking at the very same thing. But we are asking a much deeper question of what makes someone special. We are asking someone to tell us how they became who they are. We are asking a question that will take that person to a much deeper sense of who they have become and what got them to that place. It certainly isn't a simple or easy thing to ask and it requires a not so simple examination. It requires someone to bare all. It requires a story. And again, there isn't anyone who doesn't have a story.

"Speaking your truth" is sharing the experiences that made you who you are, the good, the bad, the ugly, or the beautiful. There is no one other than the individual themselves that can know their own story, or their own "truth". It has nothing to do with changing the truth to fit into one's own views. In fact, (or in truth!), the word truth in "Speak your truth" means "telling your story as only you could". Perhaps it would be less confusing to say, "Speak your story" or "Speak your life experience". If we used it this way perhaps less people would get so confused? Unfortunately, "speak your truth" lately has been taken by some to be "tell us about your side to the terrible experience of sexual assault that you had". It is sad, but true, that way too many have had these experiences, but using "speak your truth" has been misconstrued as meaning there are several "truths" behind the accusations. Instead of hearing "speak your truth", what they hear is speaking "your" truth. What is not being understood is that speaking your truth is about everything that is you, not just telling about your tragic events. It's just so much more. It has been a powerful mantra that leads to empowerment.

ANGEL PHANTOM QUARTZ

This beautiful quartz is just fascinating. Some of them can be looked at again and again and still something new is discovered inside. This is why it is such a great crystal for all of us. It reminds us how no matter how well we think we know ourselves, or no matter how much we think we know someone else, there is always something new to discover if we take another look and go deeper.

Most phantom quartz shows an outline of a previous stopping point in the crystal's growth. Within the crystal one can see the outline of what the crystal was at an early stage when something happened and the crystal stopped growing. It is representative of how we get stuck along the way sometimes. We may stop on our path but eventually we find our way and begin to grow again. It shows us that even though we may get stuck sometimes, our potential is truly amazing. Sometimes, as we are working on our spiritual evolution, it is necessary to take a look at past karma or even past lives to help us. These crystals are excellent choices for this and much more.

The Angel phantom quartz doesn't always have a clear definition of a stopping point in its growth. They are called Angel phantoms because they seem to have almost wispy wings within them that appear to be glimpses of Angels. It has a strong connection to the Angelic realm and carrying one of these will help bring clarity for the bearer in hearing the guidance of Angels. And it will remind one that the Angels are always by our sides and that we are loved.

This crystal has several minerals within that create such whimsical beauty. Each of these minerals have properties unique to themselves but when growing together it becomes a powerful tool for your evolution. It is also called Amfibole quartz and the minerals found as inclusions that create the "phantoms" are a combination of Limonite, Hematite, Kaolinite, and Lithium. Lithium has calming properties, Hematite helps keep us grounded, Kaolinite keeps us on our path and helps to strengthen our intuition, and Limonite is protective. It's like carrying our own tool of empowerment and growth all within one crystal.

Within this quartz the combination of minerals sometimes create tiny little worlds. The vision of what we see is unique to each individual. One might see an animal face while another sees a small landscape out of an alternative reality to dream in, and still another sees the flight of Angels. There is something special within this crystal for each to find guidance. With so much going on inside, this stone reminds us of our own inner strengths. It also helps us balance our energies so we don't get bogged down in the day to day stress and chaos we find ourselves drowning in sometimes. It can aid dream recall and assist one in the practice of lucid dreaming as well.

Angel Phantom Quartz is a wonder and just one more gorgeous gift from our Mother Earth that would be a great gift for anyone, even a gift to oneself. We have a limited supply of small tumbled Angel Phantom Quartz but new, hand-picked, stand-alone crystals will be here soon! A great crystal in helping one find out about their past lives to the present. Come on in and find yourself in the worlds within the Angel Phantom Quartz. jms

So if someone, whether a friend or maybe that small voice inside, says "Speak your truth", then tell your story. Your story needs to be heard even if only by you. "Speak your truth" has nothing to do with facts in regard to what others know to be true, scientific measurements, or expert analysis. Speaking your truth is not about changing the truth of matter or events as others see it. It's about embracing your life. It's about embracing who you have become. It's about seeing the beauty that is you and being able to shout to the world that you clearly see the truth of how awesome you are! Speaking your truth is having the faith to become who you were meant to become by clearly and confidently telling the world where you have been, where you see yourself going and who you are right now! And most want to hear your story because it's what made you so beautiful! So get out there and SPEAK YOUR TRUTH!

Until next time,
Namaste, Joan (and Merri)
