The image shows a collage of news headlines with red arrows indicating a narrative flow. The flow starts with the NPR headline about defunding the police, which leads to the MPRnews headline about crime rising and the council asking where the police are. This leads to the headline about council members wanting a redo on defunding. Simultaneously, the Washington Post headline about violence surging as officers leave is also linked to the MPRnews headline. Finally, the Washington Post headline about spending $6.4M to recruit more officers is linked to the MPRnews headline about the council's alarm.
